About the Authors

Karina Cardenas is a recent graduate of the Master's program in History at Cal State LA. Her work centers on gender and women of color in the U.S. She is interested in the application of relational and comparative methods in respect to women of color and their connection to medical and state institutions. She would like to thank Dr. Choi Chatterjee for her guidance and constant encouragement, Dr. Priscilla Leiva for her academic support, and the UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center for their assistance. Karina is a student Lead at Cal State LA's Special Collections and Archives, where she preserves and exhibits of rare materials. Karina is also active in her Boyle Heights community with the Los Angeles Center for Community Law and Action.

Jessica De la O earned her Master's degree in History in 2017 at Cal State LA and teaching credentials in 2016. She has worked in the field of education for ten years, progressing from teacher's aide to a History and English Teacher. At Los Angeles High School for the Arts, she is an active member of the community through her roles in Instructional Leadership Teams; Curriculum and Positive Behavioral intervention and Support, as well as an English Teacher. Jessica is currently working on her second Master's Degree in Education. Jessica would like to thank her mentors for inspiring her to further her education and to always strive for more, especially Dr. Choi Chatterjee for her ongoing support and guidance.

Micheal Duchesne is a graduate student in the History Department at Cal State LA, where he specializes in Ancient History and World History. His research interests include comparing the various Ancient Mediterranean slave systems, expressions of love in Archaic and Classical Sparta, Alexander the Great's political and military campaigns, and the efforts made by Constantine to implement pagan practices in Christianity. He is a member of Phi Alpha Theta. Micheal completed his undergraduate work in Ancient and Medieval History at the University of California, Riverside in 2016.

Katie Mishler earned her Master's degree in History from Cal State LA in 2017 and is currently Adjunct Faculty at Cerritos College. Katie presented her research at CSU Long Beach, San Francisco State, and was chosen to represent Cal State LA at the California State University Research Competition hosted at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. Katie was the co-editor-in-chief of Perspectives Vol. 44, which placed third in the print journal category, and tied for first place for best electronic journal. Katie would like to thank the outstanding faculty at Cal State LA for their unwavering support and guidance, especially Drs. Christopher Endy, Birte Pfleger, Choi Chatterjee, Scott Wells, and Eileen Ford. She would also like to recognize Dr. Carole Srole for guiding her on this project, throughout her program, and helping to navigate a new teaching career—she could not have done this without her. Finally, Katie would like to thank her husband for his encouragement and support, and for being especially understanding of the long nights, many trips to the library, lost data and deadline meltdowns.

Hana Xochitl Villafaña is currently finishing her undergraduate degree in History at Cal State LA. This summer, she will begin a two-year commitment teaching in the Los Angeles Unified School District with Teach for America while obtaining a teaching credential from Loyola Marymount University. Her research interests include modern Mexican history and its intersection with U.S. and global history. She would like to thank Dr. Choi Chatterjee for her research guidance in the field of food history.
